1. Diverse needs for methods and tools (cont.)

Growing sense of urgency for adaptation has created increasing demand for policy relevant information from climate change impacts, vulnerability and adaptation assessments.

This has led to the expansive application of methods and tools developed in other related fields, e.g., risk management, in climate assessments.

2. Current practices and services

A large number of organisations and initiatives have been disseminating assessment methods and tools...

2. Current practices and services (cont.)

Method and tools are disseminated in a variety of forms.

2. Current practices and services (cont.)

Method and tools are disseminated in a variety of forms.

- (Practitioner's) guidance

An analogy

Developing and disseminating methods and tools for a wide range of users

Cooking and serving food and drinks for diverse (and often demanding!) diners

An analogy

3. Gaps and priorities

- More explicit about the purposes, strengths and limits of available methods and tools;
- Promoting the use of common methods and tools, with a view to "standardize" the assessments

3. Gaps and priorities (cont.)

- Strengthening the documentation and dissemination of good practices and lessons learned on the application of method and tools, particularly within the context of supporting adaptation planning;
- Enhancing coordination, particularly among bi-lateral and multi-lateral programmes/projects;
