

Alexander Froede
Environment and Climate Change Division, Competence Centre for Climate Change, GIZ

Alexander Fröde is the Project Director of GIZ's "Global GCF Readiness Programmes" which supports a set of countries worldwide in the preparation for GCF. He also coordinates the activities on climate finance in GIZ's Competence Center for Climate Change. He and his team supports GIZ's projects on climate finance worldwide and is responsible for the development of tools, such as GIZ's "Ready for climate finance approach" and the CliFAssess tool.

He is a landscape ecologist with a specialization in international environmental law and environmental ethics.

Prior to his current work in GIZ headquarter he was based in Harare where he worked practically on adaptation to climate change in savannah dry land in Zimbabwe and neighbouring countries.