

Benjamin Singer

Benjamin Singer graduated with a Bachelors in anthropology at Cambridge University and a Masters in nature conservation at University College London before completing a PhD in tropical forest policies at the Institute of Political Studies and CIRAD in France.

Since 2009 Mr Singer has been managing the Facilitative Process of the United Nations Forum on Forests, which was upgraded this year to the Global Forest Financing Facilitation Network, with the aim of assisting developing countries in mobilising financing for sustainable forest management.

In the course of his studies and his work at the UNFF, he has gathered extensive field experience in Latin America, Central Africa and Southeast Asia.
