
ICHIRO SATO

Ichiro Sato joined Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) in 1997, and consistently dedicated himself to operations and coordination in the fields of environment, climate change, and disaster risk reduction. He served at JICA's overseas offices in Mexico (2003-2006) and Brazil (2010-2013), and was seconded to IUCN (International Union for Conservation of Nature) Vietnam Office from 2002 to 2003 where he took part in the Wetland and Water Program.

His current responsibility as the Deputy Director of the Office for Climate Change in JICA includes development of JICA's cooperation policy, mainstreaming climate change in its operation and institution, and promotion of external partnership with regard to climate change.