

Pascal Martinez

Pascal Martinez joined the GEF Secretariat in June 2015 as climate change specialist, in the framework of the cooperation between the World Bank Group and the Government of France.

Mr. Martinez began his career as forest engineer and acted in French national and private entities and also in international organizations (FAO and ECLAC), to promote the sustainable development, in particular the protection of the environment in the context of the international cooperation.

His diversified missions provided Mr. Martinez with a broad range of experiences in different component of the sustainable development, such as climate change, forest, biodiversity, agriculture, energy, transportation and wood building, especially in international organizations and in public policy