DESCRIPTION

This webinar explores a visual storytelling project that brings women's voices into the climate change adaptation planning process.

It showcases stories captured by women on the frontlines of climate change in Ghana and Kenya and discusses how their stories can influence decision making in NAP processes towards locally led and gender-responsive action.

In this project, women from regions facing climate challenges were mentored in photography and climate science, enabling them to document their experience and visions for resilience and consider ways to motivate action among decision-makers.
