DESCRIPTION

To deliver the Paris Agreement, climate action planning needs to shift to new levels of ambition, driving rapid and systemic change on the ground.

Cities urgently need to position themselves on an ambitious emissions reduction (or peaking) trajectory to achieve emissions neutrality and climate resilience by 2050.

The Climate Action Planning Guide was developed to support cities in developing climate action plans that are aligned with the objectives of the Paris Agreement.

Furthermore, it focuses on enriching the planning process by building the capacities for community and business engagement based on evidence and the condition of the city by facilitating transformational and implementational actions.
