I. OPENING OF THE SESSION

(Agenda item 1)

A. Opening of the first part of the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties

1. The sixth session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, convened pursuant to Article 7.4 of the Convention, was formally opened at the Netherlands Congress Centre, The Hague, The Netherlands, on 13 November 2000, by the President of the Conference at its fifth session, Mr. Jan Szyszko, Secretary of State for Climate Change of Poland.

B. Host Government welcoming ceremony

2. The formal opening was preceded by a welcoming ceremony organized by the host Government, and attended by Her Majesty Queen Beatrix of The Netherlands.

3. At the ceremony, the Minister of Housing, Spatial Planning and Environment of the Netherlands, and President-designate of the Conference, Mr. Jan Pronk, made an opening address, and the Mayor of The Hague, Mr. Wim Deetman, welcomed participants to the city.

4. Also at the ceremony, a video message from the Secretary-General of the United Nations was shown, and a presentation was made by Mr. Robert Watson, Chairman of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), in which he described the current state of scientific understanding of the earth's climate system, highlighted the vulnerability of ecological systems, and underlined the need for effective policy and technological responses.

5. During the ceremony, Aus Greidanus, a Dutch actor, read poetry composed for the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties by Dutch poet laureate Gerrit Komrij. The ceremony concluded with the presentation of the climate change-related IMAX film "The Straw that Breaks the Camel's back...?".

C. Statement by the President of the Conference of the Parties at its fifth session

(Agenda item 1 (a))

6. The President of the Conference at its fifth session said that he regarded the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change as the world's greatest economic convention, and as an opportunity for the world to start developing in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

7. When he had assumed the presidency of the fifth session he had resolved to adhere to several principles, namely: fulfilment of all imposed obligations while observing the principle of equal treatment of Member States on all issues; propagation of knowledge of the Convention's importance to sustainable world development; tapping the wealth of experience amassed by his predecessors and cooperating with them; cooperation with his successor in the conviction that a stable, long-term policy was the best chance for the success of the Convention; and close cooperation with the secretariat, Bureau and the chairmen of the subsidiary bodies.

8. After describing the events he had attended and countries he had visited during the year, he said that in every State he had sensed a great will to put the Kyoto Protocol into effect as soon as possible, preferably before the end of 2002.

9. One particular achievement in the course of his term in office, he felt, was the considerable narrowing of fields of discussion, as reflected in the streamlining of documents such as the text on land-use, land-use change and forestry, where only 10 pages remained of a document that had originally been 600 pages.

10. He recalled that the Kyoto Protocol would enter into force once it had been ratified by 55 Parties, incorporating Annex I Parties accounting in total for at least 55 per cent of the total carbon dioxide emissions for 1990. Therefore, a bridge of understanding providing mutual benefits must be built between developed and developing countries. This might include agreement to count as the reduction by developed countries a part of the emissions absorbed by sinks, and provision by the developed countries of effective and efficient financial assistance to developing countries. That would allow the developed countries to regenerate their natural resources, and the developing countries to protect their natural resources, especially the renewable ones, through new production technologies.

11. He emphasized that for such efforts to succeed, Parties must win public support and create proper implementation programmes. One such regional implementation programme might be "Sustainable human development and global change - landscape management in rural areas and greenhouse gases". He also expressed the hope that one "public awareness" day a year might be devoted directly to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change. He thanked Parties, the Bureau and the secretariat for their support during his presidency.

D. Election of the President of the Conference of the Parties at its sixth session

(Agenda item 1 (b))

12. At its 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November 2000, on the proposal of the outgoing President, the Conference of the Parties elected by acclamation Mr. Jan Pronk, Minister for Housing, Spatial Planning and the Environment of the Netherlands, as its President.

E. Statement by the President

(Agenda item 1 (c))

13. On assuming office, the President paid tribute to the work of his predecessor. He stated that if the present session of the Conference was a success, that would be due in no small measure to the preparatory work done in the inter-sessional period, as a result of which the sixth session would be able to proceed with no time wasted.

14. In an opening address, delivered at the welcoming ceremony, he had indicated that a formidable task awaited the Conference at its sixth session. There were plenty of reasons to take on climate change at the present juncture, since the climate had never changed as fast as it was changing at present, and the evidence was mounting to suggest that greenhouse gases were having a visible impact on the environment. The effects of climate change were irreversible – for ecosystems, agriculture, water supply and health. Ironically, developing countries, which were least to blame for the situation, would suffer the most devastating consequences – yet they had the least economic resilience. Moreover, there were important links between climate change and other global environmental issues, such as the recovery of the ozone layer, desertification and biodiversity.

15. The Kyoto Protocol had been the first instrument in which industrialized countries had committed themselves to quantified agreements on targets for limiting emissions of greenhouse gases. But it would be much more difficult to agree on instruments than it had been to agree on targets. The Conference would need to take hard decisions. If negotiations could not keep pace with climate change; if decisions only took into account the interests of rich countries, neglecting those of the poorest countries; and if the commitment to tackle the dangers threatening the quality of life on earth, recently reaffirmed at the Millennium Summit, was not made good – then the credibility of the Conference would be in question.

16. He was well aware that there were many difficult issues on which decisions were needed: adequate financial support for developing countries; the Kyoto mechanisms; the role of carbon dioxide sinks; the compliance regime; and others. But, for all of these, reasonable compromises were available. What was required was to make a principled, balanced and credible choice: by reducing greenhouse gas emissions; by supporting developing countries as they developed sound policies for the future; and by protecting them from the consequences of unsustainable policies from the past. In this task, the political credibility of the Conference was at stake: negotiations were not an end in themselves, there must be a willingness to give and take, and this would require confidence-building, and a willingness on the part of all to cooperate rather than compete.

F. Message from the Secretary-General of the United Nations

17. In his pre-recorded video message, shown at the welcoming ceremony, the Secretary-General of the United Nations sent his best wishes to all at the Conference, especially to the young people who were attending as part of their national delegations. Involvement of young people was crucial. The Conference was about the world they would inherit, and their generation must look after it better than his own. The tasks before the world were enormous. If greenhouse gas emissions were to be brought down to a sustainable level, radical changes were needed in the world economy, and in the way all people lived.

18. The Conference could make a substantial contribution: first, by drawing up a credible rule book of measures that industrialized countries must take, since at present they produced most of the emissions; second, by helping to chart a new path of development - all peoples had an equal right to development, but measures to reduce global warming in industrialized countries would be in vain if, meanwhile, developing countries were following the same wasteful and noxious pattern of industrialization; third, by giving a convincing signal to the private sector that reducing greenhouse gas emissions would pay. Once businessmen and women are convinced of that, they should come up with new, eco-friendly technologies, which in turn would generate jobs and other opportunities. Hitherto, corporations had profited by polluting the environment: in future, they must have an incentive to clean it up.

19. In conclusion, the Secretary-General observed that two months previously, at the Millennium Summit, world leaders had resolved to adopt a new ethic of conservation and stewardship, and, as a first step, to make every effort to bring the Kyoto Protocol into force by 2002. If that first step was achieved, the hopes of a sustainable future would be greatly strengthened. All must do their utmost to make it happen.

G. Statement by the Executive Secretary

(Agenda item 1 (e))

20. The Executive Secretary paid tribute to the outgoing President's commitment to keeping the negotiating process on track since the fifth session, and assured the incoming President of his support in meeting the challenges ahead. He also acknowledged the investment of the incoming President's personal time in the preparations for the Conference, and expressed his thanks for the generosity of the resources made available by the host Government.

21. Recent preparations for the Conference had been intense. National positions had been reviewed; numerous contacts had taken place among delegations; and informal consultations had helped to refine negotiating texts. Thanks to the special efforts of the Convention secretariat, and with the cooperative efforts of United Nations colleagues in Geneva and also in Nairobi, the Conference documentation was in good shape, with all recent texts available in all languages in time for the opening day of the session.

22. Recalling the remarkable presentation by the Chairman of the IPCC at the welcoming ceremony, he stated it had given all food for thought: in particular, that the Conference could not afford to delay action to deal with climate change; and that the Conference was building for the long term and must build soundly. Thus, the Conference must work towards a comprehensive success without resorting to any "quick fixes" that would be regretted later. The goal of action must continue to be to modify long-term trends in emissions of greenhouse gases.

23. He outlined two measures of success at the Conference. First, developing countries should leave it feeling significantly better off in terms of support for their efforts to address climate change and its impacts, and their genuine efforts to play their defined and proper part in the emerging global strategy in pursuit of their sustainable development. Secondly, delegations from all Parties should be convinced that the Kyoto Protocol could be effectively implemented, and be ready to launch domestic processes towards ratification, where this had not already been done. A fitting result of the Conference would be for Annex I Parties whose ratification would bring the Protocol into force to state that, in their judgement, the outcome of the Conference had made the Protocol "ratifiable".

24. In conclusion, the Executive Secretary pointed to the Kyoto Protocol as an heroic achievement, but one that left many loose ends. What was needed now was an agreement using clear and unambiguous language that could be put to work by economic operators as soon as the Protocol entered into force – or even before entry into force, if there was an early start for the clean development mechanism. Thus the sequencing of the work of the Conference was extremely important: substantive results must be achieved in the first week, and the main political agreements in the middle of the second week, leaving enough time for the consequential technical drafting to be completed before closure.

H. Other statements

25. At the 2nd plenary meeting, on 13 November 2000, statements were made by the representatives of Nigeria (on behalf of the Group of 77 and China), Samoa (on behalf of the Alliance of Small Island States), Canada, the United States of America, France (on behalf of European Community and its member States), Burkina Faso (on behalf of the African Group), Brazil (on behalf of the Latin American Group), Saudi Arabia, India, China, Switzerland (on behalf of the Environmental Integrity Group), Morocco (on behalf of the League of Arab States), Vanuatu (on behalf of the Least Developed Countries), Kuwait, Central African Republic, Kazakhstan, and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

II. ORGANIZATIONAL MATTERS

(Agenda item 2)

A. Status of ratification of the Convention and its Kyoto Protocol

(Agenda item 2 (a))

26. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November, the Conference of the Parties had before it an information document on the status of ratification of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and its Kyoto Protocol (FCCC/CP/2000/INF.1).

27. On the invitation of the President, the Conference of the Parties took note with satisfaction that as at 13 November 2000, 182 States and one regional economic integration organization were Parties to the Convention, and therefore eligible to participate in decision-making at the session. The President informed the Conference that Equatorial Guinea had deposited its instrument of ratification on 16 August 2000 and would become a Party on 14 November. He also noted that Bosnia and Herzegovina had deposited its instrument of ratification on 7 September 2000 and would thus become a Party on 6 December 2000. That would bring the total number of Parties to 185.

28. The Conference of the Parties further took note that as at 13 November 2000, 30 States had ratified or acceded to the Kyoto Protocol; expressed its appreciation to those States that had ratified the Protocol; and invited other States to do so.

B. Adoption of the rules of procedure

(Agenda item 2 (b))

29. At the 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November, the President informed the Conference that he had received a report from the President of the Conference at its fifth session on his consultations on the draft rules of procedure. As the issue was still unresolved, the President intended to undertake further consultations with a view to achieving resolution on the adoption of the rules of procedure.

30. On the proposal of the President, the Conference of the Parties decided that, in the meantime, as at previous sessions, the draft rules of procedure as contained in document FCCC/CP/1996/2 should continue to be applied, with the exception of draft rule 42.

31. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, the President informed the Conference that owing to the pressure of negotiations during the first part of the sixth session, it had not been possible to undertake consultations to resolve this issue. At the same meeting, the Conference of the Parties, on the proposal of the President, decided that this item should be placed on the provisional agenda of its seventh session, and noted the President's intention to conduct informal consultations with Parties and report on the outcome thereof at the seventh session.

C. Adoption of the agenda

(Agenda item 2 (c))

32. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November, the Conference of the Parties had before it a note by the Executive Secretary containing the provisional agenda and annotations (FCCC/CP/2000/1 and Corr.1 and Add.1). The provisional agenda had been prepared by the Executive Secretary in agreement with the President of the fifth session of the Conference, taking into account views expressed by Parties at the twelfth session of the Subsidiary Body for Implementation, and consultations with the Bureau.

33. At the same meeting, the President recalled that item 5 of the provisional agenda, "Second review of the adequacy of Article 4, paragraphs 2 (a) and (b), of the Convention", had been included in accordance with rules 10 (c) and 16 of the draft rules of procedure being applied. He informed the Conference that the Group of 77 and China had proposed an amendment to the wording of that item.² There was as yet no consensus and it was his intention to consider how to deal with the item and report back to the Conference. This was a sensitive subject and he stressed that there would be no surprises. He therefore proposed that the item should be held in abeyance.

34. The Conference of the Parties accordingly adopted the provisional agenda contained in document FCCC/CP/2000/1 and Corr.1, on the understanding that item 5 was held in abeyance. The President undertook to consider how to deal with this item and report back to the Conference.

35. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, the President informed the Conference that he had thoroughly considered how to deal with the item 5 issue, but had found no consensus on how to proceed. At the same meeting, the Conference of the Parties, on the proposal of the President, agreed to include this item, with its accompanying footnote, in the provisional agenda for the seventh session of the Conference, and noted the President's intention to continue his consideration of possible ways of achieving consensus on the issues to be covered under this agenda item and to report thereon to the seventh session of the Conference.

36. The agenda, as adopted at the first part of the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties, thus read as follows:

³ Following the inability of the Conference of the Parties at its fifth session to reach any conclusion on this matter (FCCC/CP/1999/6, para. 18), and following rule 10 (c) and rule 16 of the draft rules of procedure being applied, an item entitled "Second review of the adequacy of Article 4.2(a) and (b) of the Convention" was included in the provisional agenda for the sixth session. Attached to this item was a footnote reflecting a proposal made at the fifth session by the Group of 77 and China to amend this item to read "Review of the adequacy of implementation of Article 4, paragraph 2 (a) and (b) of the Convention". At the first part of its sixth session, the Conference of the Parties decided to include this item in the provisional agenda for its seventh session (see paragraphs 33 - 35 above).

⁵ At the fifth session of the Conference, the President had proposed, on the basis of consultations with the Bureau, that with regard to this sub-item it should be understood that the work programme on the Kyoto Protocol mechanisms would be dealt with as a whole. In the same spirit, it was understood that the Conference of the Parties, at its sixth session, would look at those aspects which were to be acted on by the Conference of the Parties as well as

- (d) Procedures and mechanisms relating to compliance under the Kyoto Protocol;
 - (e) “Best practices” in policies and measures;

 - (b) Closure of the session.

D. Participation of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia in the sixth session of the Conference

37. At the 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November, the Conference was informed that the General Assembly of the United Nations, in its resolution 55/12, had admitted the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a “new Member” of the United Nations.

38. At that meeting, the Conference decided that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia should be invited to participate as an observer State in the sixth session, pending information from the Legal Counsel of the United Nations as to the status of the ‘new’ Federal Republic of Yugoslavia those requiring action by the Conference of the Parties serving as the meeting of the Parties to the Kyoto Protocol at its first session (FCCC/CP/1999/6 para. 16).

as a party to multilateral treaties ratified or acceded to by the 'former' Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

39. At the 8th plenary meeting, on 24 November, the Conference was informed that consultations were still under way between the Office of Legal Affairs of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and interested Parties on this matter.

40. The President indicated that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia would continue to participate as an observer State in the Conference and sessions of its subsidiary bodies, pending receipt and consideration of the relevant communication from the Office of the Legal Affairs of the United Nations.

E. Election of officers other than the President

(Agenda item 2 (d))

41. At the 8th plenary meeting, on 24 November, on the proposal of the President, the Conference of the Parties elected by acclamation six Vice-Presidents and the Rapporteur of the Conference, on the understanding that consultations would continue among the Group of Asian States regarding the remaining (seventh) post of Vice-President. It was also understood that a representative of the host country for the seventh session of the Conference of the Parties (Morocco) would participate ex officio in the work of the Bureau.

42. The Bureau of the Conference was thus constituted as follows:

President

Mr. Jan Pronk (Netherlands)

Vice Presidents

Mr. Raúl Estrada-Oyuela (Argentina)
Mr. Mohammed S. Barkindo (Nigeria)
Mr. Tuiloma Neroni Slade (Samoa)
Mr. Andrej Kranjc (Slovenia)
Mr. Philip M. Gwage (Uganda)
Mr. Viacheslav Lipinsky (Ukraine)

Rapporteur

Mr. Gao Feng (China)

Chairman of the Subsidiary Body for Scientific and Technological Advice

Mr. Harald Dovland (Norway)

Chairman of the Subsidiary Body for Implementation

Mr. John Ashe (Antigua and Barbuda)

43. In thus constituting the Bureau, the Conference of the Parties recognized that it was, exceptionally, waiving rule 22 of the draft rules of procedure being applied.

44. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, the President noted that the nomination for post of Vice-President from the Group of Asian States was still outstanding.

F. Admission of organizations as observers

(Agenda item 2 (e))

45. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 1st plenary meeting, on 13 November, the Conference of the Parties had before it a note by the secretariat on the admission of organizations as observers (FCCC/CP/2000/2), listing five intergovernmental organizations and 85 non-governmental organizations that had requested to be admitted as observers. In accordance with a recommendation by the Bureau of the Conference, which had reviewed the list of applicant organizations, the Conference of the Parties decided to admit those organizations as observers.

46. At the same meeting, the representative of Malaysia (speaking on behalf of the members of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN)), requested the accreditation of ASEAN as an intergovernmental organization at the present session.

47. At the 8th plenary meeting, on 24 November, the Conference of the Parties, in the light of the consideration by the Bureau of this matter, had before it a further note by the secretariat on the admission of organizations as observers (FCCC/CP/2000/2/Add.1) and decided to admit the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) as an observer to the sixth session of the Conference. In this connection, the President noted that applications for accreditation as observer organizations should be submitted to the secretariat at least eight weeks before the beginning of the Conference, and called upon all Parties to respect that deadline.

G. Organization of work, including the sessions of the subsidiary bodies

(Agenda item 2 (f))

48. 108. At its 9th plenary meeting, the Conference of the Parties considered the draft report on the first part of its sixth session (FCCC/CP/2000/L.1 and Add.1-4), which was introduced by the Rapporteur.

109. After a procedural discussion, in which the representatives of three Parties and one Observer State took part, the Conference of the Parties adopted the draft report on the first part of its sixth session, and authorized the Rapporteur, under the guidance of the President and with the assistance of the secretariat, to complete the report.

B. Suspension of the session

(Agenda item 11 (b))

1. Adoption of decision 1/CP.6

110. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, the President introduced a draft decision entitled "Implementation of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action" (see FCCC/CP/2000/L.3). The decision sought to reflect the outcome of work to that point and to prepare the ground for further work at a resumed sixth session.

111. After a brief discussion, during which some amendments to the draft decision were proposed, the Conference of the Parties adopted decision 1/CP.6 entitled "Implementation of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action", as amended (FCCC/CP/2000/5/Add.2, section I).

2. Summing-up by the President

112. Also at the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, upon the request of a Party, the President recapitulated a summing-up which he had made earlier in the day in an informal high-level setting.

113. He observed that, while the Conference had now come to the end of the negotiating process at its present session, it had not been able to reach agreement on a comprehensive and balanced decision which could serve as a basis for the finalization of the negotiating texts that had been submitted to the Conference through the subsidiary bodies. He observed that negotiations had revealed a wide variety of views amongst the Parties; as a result of these divergences of view, agreement had not been possible.

114. Nevertheless, it was his view as the facilitator of the negotiations, and confirmed by a number of the co-facilitators of the negotiations and by many delegations, that, while there had been wide divergences of views, there had also been movement in the right direction. At one moment, it had even seemed as if there was a near convergence, but this had proved elusive - partly due to lack of time; partly because the issues were so complicated; partly because of the procedures chosen; and partly because, for a number of delegates, the issues did not yet seem ripe for a political decision.

115. However, he felt that it might be possible to further the negotiations and perhaps to conclude them, leading to an agreement, at a date earlier than that established for the seventh session of the Conference of the Parties. Indeed, the Conference would be wise not to lose the political momentum which had been generated; nor should it lose the opportunity to respond to the wide expectations that had been aroused in the international community with regard to the implementation of the Kyoto Protocol.

116. Accordingly, in line with the views expressed by the representatives of many Parties, and also with the agreement of the Bureau, he had proposed that the sixth session of the Conference not be closed, but be resumed in the year 2001. Such a resumed session would have to be well prepared in order to be successful.

3. Expression of gratitude to the host country

117. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, Nigeria (speaking on behalf of the Group of 77 and China), introduced a draft resolution entitled “Expression of gratitude to the Government of the Kingdom of the Netherlands and to the city and people of The Hague” (FCCC/CP/2000/L.4).

118. At the same meeting, the Conference adopted this draft as resolution 3/CP.6 (see FCCC/CP/2000/5/Add.2, section II).

4. Closing statement by the President

119. In a closing statement at the 9th plenary meeting, on 25 November, the President said that his disappointment at the lack of results at the Conference was somewhat allayed as a result of discussions with representatives and statements by Parties made in the informal high-level political meeting that had preceded the formal 9th plenary meeting. While national constituencies, and the media, would indeed be disappointed at the outcome of the Conference, that sentiment would need to be addressed in a positive spirit by showing that the Conference, by deciding to resume rather than close its sixth session, was giving itself a serious chance to reach agreement.

120. The President pointed to the important linkage between the proceedings of the Conference and the outside world, through the participation of many guests from outside, young people, representatives of non-governmental organizations, business organizations, environmental organizations and others. The Conference had also been honoured by the presence of the Queen of the Netherlands, Her Majesty Queen Beatrix, on two occasions, which demonstrated her personal commitment to the issue of climate change.

121. In conclusion, he paid tribute to the dedication and hard work of all participants and to all members of the secretariat - both those “on stage”, and those behind the scenes; both those from the UNFCCC secretariat in Bonn and their collaborators from the Netherlands - who had together done their very best to ensure an efficient Conference for all.

122. The President then declared the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties suspended.
