

Mr. Emerson Resende

Moderator

Emerson is a climate finance and policy strategist, with over 15 years of experience learning from and advising governments, the private sector, and intergovernmental organizations, including some United Nations agencies in New York and in the Caribbean, the IDB Invest in Washington DC, KPMG in Africa, development agencies in South America, and the largest climate fund in the world, the Green Climate Fund in South Korea. He also dedicates time to mentoring the eager minds of tomorrow at universities around the world and life-coaching selected people. Besides all that, he's an avid and ok-ish weekend tennis player, a football and beach volleyball sportsman, an alleged fierce and competitive driver on the go-karting tarmac, a self-confessed terrible saxophone performer and a passionate [and very] amateur chef for friends and family.
