

Dr. Gabrielle Dreyfus

Senior Scientist at the Institute for Governance & Sustainable Development. She is a climate scientist by training with over a decade of experience working on climate and clean energy in the US government and with civil society. She recently co-authored the UNEP and IEA Cooling Emissions and Policy Synthesis Report and is chief science advisor to the Kigali Cooling Efficiency Program, and a member of the technical review committee of the Global Cooling Prize.