Tim co-heads the Bank of England's Climate Hub, which leads the Bank's response to climate change. His focus is on the domestic and international climate aspects of prudential supervision and the regulatory framework, assessing financial stability risks from climate change, transition finance, as well as the Bank's own operations.

Regarding transition planning, Tim Co-Leads the Network for Greening the Financial System's work on transition plans, sits on the UK Transition Plan Taskforce and an observer on the UK's Transition Finance Market Review, as well as across a number international setters looking at the topic, including the Financial Stability Board.
