SLYCAN TRUST

SLYCAN Trust is a non-profit think tank based working on thematic areas of climate change adaptation and resilience, loss & damage, climate risk management, ecosystem conservation and restoration, sustainable development, social justice, ethical production, and animal welfare.

Across our projects and activities, gender is a key focus and consideration. Our interventions aim to be gender-responsive or transformative and incorporate gender-specific aspects, elements, and perspectives, for example in the following areas:

Adaptation & climate risk

Gender in National Adaptation Plans and NDC implementation; gender aspects of climate risk management and transfer in Sri Lankan farming communities; ecosystem-based adaptation and fishing communities in Sri Lanka

Enabling environment

Policies, laws, and institutions

Entrepreneurship

Support for sustainable and climate-friendly women entrepreneurship; Ethical Pitch Accelerator; capacity-building programs for youth and women

Access Control Ownership Decisionmaking

Inclusion Participation Resilience

Food systems

GENDER

Adaptation and risk management

Livelihoods & labour

Human

Role models Norms and traditions Cultural expectations Self images

Local & traditional knowledge

Ecosystem conservation

mobility

Migration

Gender-based aspects of climate-related human migration; gendered impacts on individuals and communities; women staying behind in case of migration; policy analysis and research related to internal climate migration and climate impacts on foreign employment

Youth

Youth engagement and empowerment; Global Youth Forum on Climate Change; youth and women in farming communities

Compensation

Recognition

Guidelines and considerations for incorporating gender aspects and perspectives into climate actions and interventions across the sectors of agriculture, biodiversity, and forestry.

Addressing gender as a key issue for just transition in food systems, the fashion industry, and other sectors; the role of women workers and entrepreneurs; social protection and policies to facilitate gender-responsive just transition.

