International Energy
Agency

Emma Gordon works at the International Energy Agency as an Energy and Investment Policy Analyst. She joined the Agency in 2021 and focuses on sustainable finance, as well as a regional focus on Africa. Prior to the IEA, she was a product manager for the carbon offering at Sustainalytics, a leading ESG data provider (recently acquired by Morningstar). In this role, she oversaw carbon emissions and transition risk data products and worked with institutional investor clients on how best to respond to changing risk and reporting landscapes. Prior to Sustainalytics, Emma worked at Wood Mackenzie and IHS in country risk-related positions focused on Africa, forecasting political, social and economic risks for energy companies and investors.
