

FOOD SYSTEMS DIALOGUES

JOIN US

You are invited to the COP25 Madrid Food Systems Dialogues (FSDs) event.

Dr. David Nabarro, 2018 World Food Prize laureate, and Curator of the FSDs, would be delighted for you to contribute your expertise and experience to the global conversation.

The COP25 Madrid Food Systems Dialogues will be an opportunity to explore options for food systems transformation in the world context.

This will be the 24th in the series of FSDs and the second to take place at a climate COP. The last took place in Katowice 2018 with 30 high-level participants: it made a significant contribution to the FSDs outputs with a particular emphasis on food systems and climate change.

ABOUT THE FSDs

The Food Systems Dialogues (FSDs) are a global series of facilitated round-table discussions that encourage collective action for transforming food systems. In the future, everyone should be able to access nutritious and healthy diets from food produced in a sustainable manner.

FSDs bring together diverse actors in food systems (with expertise in farming, public health, food and beverage, catering, marketing, humanitarian action) from government, civil society, business and academia, to share perspectives, examine opportunities and understand trade-offs for change.

Since their launch in June 2018, 23 FSDs events have taken place across Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and North- and South America involving more than 1300 leaders and practitioners from multiple organizations.
