Linh Do is passionate about climate justice and social movements. She's spent the last decade working across advocacy, engagement and media. Linh is currently the Director of the Wattle Fellowship at the University of Melbourne, a Bertha Fellow and a board member at Climate Action Network Australia.

In the lead up to the Paris negotiations, she served as the publisher of The Verb. There she worked with a global team to localise and humanise stories from the UN climate change negotiations. Linh was most recently Australia and Pacific lead for Climate Reality, Al Gore's climate change leadership program.

Her work has been featured in Al Jazeera, Vogue, the Huffington Post and the Washington Post amongst others. She can otherwise be found walking very quickly, reading, eating ice cream and practicing yoga.
