

Breakout group 2:

1. One of the key elements for the implementation of NDCs is the provision of capacity-building support. Currently, there are different organizations providing capacity-building support. How can we make sure that there is coherence in this regard at the national level?
2. What incentives can be provided to organizations providing capacity-building support to strengthen collaboration, coherence, and coordination in the delivery of readiness and capacity-building support to developing countries?
3. What can be done to strengthen collaboration, coherence, and coordination of support for efforts at national level to achieve long-term capacity in developing countries through the UNFCCC process? (policy guidance, work of constituted bodies, etc.)

Report Back: Breakout Group 2

Enhancing coherence and coordination amongst national and international stakeholders for the design and delivery of capacity-building activities supporting NDC implementation

➤ Challenges:

- Different challenges across countries (the need to build capacity for local consultants; Capacity-building projects are sometimes short-term)
- Capacity-building needs to be viewed as a long-term process and be kept track on in order to not lose the outcomes and results;
- Competition between organizations in terms of providing capacity-building, each institution has its own incentives and wants to deliver certain outcomes.
- Different organizations with different mandates, and some mandates are similar → need to have collaboration among bodies, need to have conversation and partnership establishment, also in term of innovating, delivering outcomes.
- Capacity-building should be delivered on the basis of identified country needs.

➤ Examples of practice for coherence objective:

- Using common methodology/proposals to develop projects together (examples from Crispin and Caribbean)
- Need to develop long-term agenda (suggest from Indonesia); Committee for Capacity-building at national level (committee should include different actors, civil society, private sector, etc.), bodies should coordinate together (to have coherence in term of mandate, leading roles of ministries, etc.)
