Hello,

Would like to make sure that the following is taken into account when considering carbon removal pathways

- Nature based solutions are not permanent and are extremely easy to game, as has been shown in the last year by many news articles
- Engineered solution can scale far further than nature based solutions and they already work. We will need help from government to subsidize this industry so it can bring the cost down and can support itself, but the benefits on the other end will be huge (and necessary!) if we are successful.

Thank you for your work,

Thoralf Gutierrez
