C. Possible action by the Subsidiary Body for Implementation

6. SBI 41 may wish to consider the information contained in this document in the context of monitoring and evaluating progress made in the NAP process at SBI 42, as mandated by decision 5/CP.17, paragraph 37.

II. Overview of the process to formulate and implement national adaptation plans

7. COP 16 established the NAP process to enable LDC Parties to formulate and implement NAPs, and invited other developing country Parties to employ the modalities formulated to support the NAPs.⁶ Between 2011 and 2013 the COP adopted three decisions on NAPs,⁷ containing mandates in relation to the framing, guidelines, financial and technical support, reporting, monitoring and review of the NAP process.

8. The following are the objectives of the NAP process:

(a) To reduce vulnerability to the impacts of climate change, by building adaptive capacity and resilience;

(b) To facilitate the integration of climate change adaptation, in a coherent manner, into relevant new and existing policies, programmes and activities, in particular development planning processes and strategies, within all relevant sectors and at different levels, as appropriate.

9. The initial guidelines for the formulation of NAPs⁸ provide the following elements of the NAP process:

(a) Laying the groundwork and addressing gaps;

(b) Preparatory elements;

(c) Implementation strategies;

(d) Reporting, monitoring and evaluation.

10. The subsequent technical guidelines for the NAP process,⁹ prepared by the LEG as mandated by the COP, are based on the elements listed in paragraph 9 above.

³ The NAP Expo took place on 8 and 9 August 2014 in Bonn, Germany. Representatives of Parties and relevant organizations gathered to share experiences and to discuss support for the NAP process as well as to identify gaps and needs. More information is available at <<http://unfccc.int/8425>>.

⁴ The task force on NAPs met on 26 and 27 September 2014 in Bonn, Germany, with 17 representatives of United Nations agencies, relevant multilateral and bilateral organizations and non-governmental organizations supporting the NAP process to discuss their experiences and to explore how organizations can best support the process. Further details available in document FCCC/SB/2014/2, paragraphs 38 and 39.

⁵ Further details on specific reports considered, and the information that was extracted, are available on NAP Central under support/database on support.

A. Financial support

16. The GEF provided USD 2.19 million to the NAP global support programme for the LDCs for the period June 2013 to December 2014.²⁰ The programme is implemented by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) together with other partners, to support the LDCs under three pillars related to the NAP process: institutional support, technical support and knowledge brokering. Furthermore, the GEF communicated that many national adaptation programme of action (NAPA) projects that are funded through the LDCF contribute towards the objectives of the NAP process. As at 15 September 2014, a total of 158 NAPA projects had been approved by the GEF Council, with LDCF grants amounting to USD 882.7 million since 2007.

²⁰ See document FCCC/CP/2014/2. More information on the NAP global support programme is available at <<http://www.undp-alm.org/projects/naps-ldcs>>.

17. Developed country Parties communicated examples of the financial support provided by them to various developing country Parties for the NAP process, including the provision of support by:

(a) The United States of America for multi-stakeholder workshops in Jamaica and United Republic of Tanzania to lay the groundwork for the NAP process and for 11 West African coastal countries within the Economic Community of West African States to promote national action on adaptation planning and regional cooperation on coastal adaptation;

(b) Germany to Cambodia and Togo for the identification and assessment of institutional arrangements, programmes and policies and the capacity for the overall coordination and leadership of the NAP process, and to 12 Pacific Island countries to strengthen their capacity to cope with climate change;

(c) Austria to the Republic of Moldova to put in place its NAP process, contributing to and building upon existing development planning strategies, and to implement priority adaptation actions;

(d) The European Union, through the Global Climate Change Alliance (GCCA), to Bhutan to enhance the resilience of rural households to the effects of climate change, to Malawi to alleviate poverty and enhance resilience, and to Pacific Island countries to contribute towards a coherent, coordinated, efficient and mainstreamed way of delivering climate change adaptation support at the national and regional levels.

18. Furthermore, developed country Parties communicated that there has been broader support provided to developing countries through a variety of means for adaptation activities that could contribute or build up to the NAP process, including that provided:

(a) By individual countries to developing countries;

(b) Through programmes such as the Africa Adaptation Programme, funded by Japan, GCCA under the European Union, and the Pilot Program for Climate Resilience, funded by multiple donors.

19. More information on the support provided by developed countries for the NAP process referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 above is available on NAP Central.²¹

(c) The NWP has undertaken a compilation of case studies on national adaptation planning processes,²⁵ produced a synthesis report on methods and tools for, and good practices and lessons learned relating to, adaptation planning processes addressing ecosystems, human settlements, water resources and health, and good practices and lessons learned related to processes and structures for linking national and local adaptation planning,²⁶ and has compiled submissions from Parties and NWP partner organizations on good practices in and lessons learned from national adaptation planning.²⁷

21. Other bodies under the Convention have also undertaken activities that are related to the provision of technical support to the NAP process. A detailed list of activities carried out by constituted bodies under the Convention that are related to the provision of technical support for the NAP process is provided in the annex.

24. United Nations organizations and specialized agencies communicated the following programmes and initiatives that could contribute to the NAP process:

(a) The World Meteorological Organization (WMO) Global Framework for Climate Services, which is a global partnership of governments and organizations for the production and use of climate information and services. Under the initiative, a project entitled "Climate Services Adaptation Programme in Africa"³⁰ was launched in 2013 to strengthen the production of user-friendly climate services for food security, nutrition, health and disaster risk reduction in Malawi and United Republic of Tanzania;

(b) Capacity-building provided by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to enable the assessment of the long-term impacts of climate change on agriculture, as well as the provision of technical support for the implementation of risk management practices in the agriculture sector, such as the use of stress-tolerant crop varieties and soil and water conservation, to a number of LDCs and countries that are not LDCs;

(c) The public-health projects of the World Health Organization in the context of climate adaptation, which include: enhancing early warning and early action systems; building the capacity of national actors; providing pilot interventions for the reduction of specific health risks; and producing documents and sharing lessons learned on addressing the health risks associated with climate change;

²⁹ A list of the countries receiving support is available at <<http://www.undp-alm.org/nap-gsp-countries>>.

³⁰ Joint programme between World Meteorological Organization, World Health Organization, World Food Programme, International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, Climate Change, Agriculture and Food Security and Centre for International Climate and Environmental Research – Oslo.

(d) The Global Water Partnership’s work in supporting countries in the NAP process by: mainstreaming water security as a cross-cutting issue in Burkina Faso’s draft NAP; taking stock of initiatives for mainstreaming climate change into development in the Niger; developing road maps; supporting a stakeholder consultation workshop on the NAP process in Malawi;³¹ and organizing a regional workshop for South Asian countries on lessons learned in the implementation of climate change adaptation strategies in the water sector;

(e) An International Organization for Migration (IOM) project entitled “Migration, environment and climate change: evidence for policy”, which provides new evidence for policymaking on migration, the environment and climate change, with particular emphasis on migration as an adaptation strategy. IOM has provided support to Dominican Republic, Haiti, Kenya, Mauritius, Papua New Guinea and Viet Nam. The main activities for 2014 are: establishing working groups and meetings, which are crucial for identifying policy needs in order to integrate migration into adaptation planning; stocktaking of existing evidence and data; and developing a training manual, including a module on how to integrate migration into NAPs, with country-specific case studies.

25. Furthermore, various organizations are developing supplementary materials to the technical guidelines for the NAP process. Some of the organizations have published their supplementary materials, while some have communicated their draft supplementary materials to the LEG for comment. Table 4 provides the current list of supplementary materials, some of which have been finalized, while others are to be finalized soon.

V. Concluding remarks

26. A number of developing country Parties, mostly LDCs, are undertaking various measures towards the NAP process. These are mainly around the first (laying the groundwork and addressing gaps) and second (preparatory elements) elements of the NAP process. The measures include multi-stakeholder workshops, stocktaking exercises, discussions to launch the process at national level, road maps and strategies for the NAP process, vulnerability and risk assessments. In addition, a number of channels to support the initial work on the NAP process have been put in place, including the support through the LDCF and the SCCF, the NAP global support programme, bilateral and multilateral agencies, and other organizations.
