PART TWO: ACTION TAKEN BY THE CONFERENCE OF THE PARTIES AT ITS FIFTH SESSION<sup>1</sup>

- I. DECISIONS ADOPTED BY THE CONFERENCE OF THE PARTIES
- II. OTHER ACTION TAKEN BY THE CONFERENCE OF THE PARTIES

I. OPENING OF THE SESSION

(Agenda item 1)

1. The fifth session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, convened pursuant to Article 7.4 of the Convention, was opened at the Hotel Maritim, Bonn, Germany, on 25 October 1999, by the President of the Conference at its fourth session, Ms. María Julia Alsogaray, Secretary of Natural Resources and Sustainable Development, Argentina.

A. Statement by the President of the Conference at its fourth session

(Agenda item 1 (a))

2. The President of the Conference at its fourth session welcomed all participants to the fifth session of the Conference of the Parties. She said that the post-Kyoto process was as significant and challenging as the adoption of the Kyoto Protocol itself. The priorities to be addressed were outlined in the Buenos Aires Plan of Action (decision 1/CP.4), which had integrated the core actions under the Convention with the negotiations on Protocol issues. The Buenos Aires Plan of Action had also set ambitious and politically firm deadlines for agreement on those issues at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties, which was vital for ensuring that the Kyoto Protocol entered into force as early as possible. It was clear that the objectives of Article 4.2 of the Convention would not be reached by many Annex I Parties. At the same time, developing countries were rapidly becoming a significant source of additional greenhouse gas emissions, even though their per capita levels remained relatively low. Progress had thus been slower than expected and much remained to be done. Mere stabilization, or a slight reduction of emissions from Annex I Parties, was not enough. It was essential to modify longer-term trends by creating the conditions that would allow the early entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol, and a clear manifestation of political will was urgently required in order to move the process forward. She therefore urged the Conference to send out a convincing signal to continue along the path embarked on in Rio de Janeiro, which should lead to the entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol by "Rio + 10", that is, by the year 2002. In wishing the participants every success in their deliberations, she expressed the hope that the advocacy and involvement of non-governmental organizations, the business sector and civil society would continue to contribute positively to the debate and to decisive action.

B. Election of the President of the Conference at its fifth session

(Agenda item 1 (b))

3. At the 1st plenary meeting, on 25 October, on the proposal of the outgoing President, the Conference of the Parties elected by acclamation Mr. Jan Szyszko, Secretary of State for Climate Change, Poland, as its President.

C. Statement by the President

(Agenda item 1 (c))

4. On assuming office, the President paid tribute to the great negotiating skills of the President of the Conference at its fourth session and to her commitment to the cause of climate change. He said that global warming was currently considered worldwide as the main environmental challenge of the coming years. The targets relating to the stabilization and further reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, set in the Convention and in the Kyoto Protocol, required urgent and effective actions to be taken by Parties. The current session of the Conference should be a milestone in the implementation of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action. The agenda contained a number of difficult political and technical issues on which progress needed to be made so that decisions could be taken at the sixth session of the Conference that would trigger ratification of the Kyoto Protocol and offer constructive incentives to developing countries to enhance their active participation in the climate agenda in the context of their sustainable development. Noting that a growing number of businesses and industries now viewed their contribution to limiting emissions as inevitable, essential and even profitable, he emphasized the importance of giving clear, positive signals to business and industry by finding consensus on a number of technical questions. He expressed the hope that negotiations at the current session would, in particular, succeed in advancing the work on defining the rules by which developed countries could lower the costs of meeting their targets by reducing emissions in other countries through the Kyoto Protocol mechanisms and the rules governing compliance and non-compliance, as well as on other issues such as mitigation of adverse impacts of climate change and the implementation of response measures.

D. Addresses of welcome

(Agenda item 1 (d))

5. Mr. Gerhard Schröder, Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany, cordially welcomed the participants to the fifth session of the Conference of the Parties. He thanked the Convention secretariat for the smooth organization of the Conference and stated the wish of Germany to host additional United Nations organizations in Bonn.

6. He said that the vision of sustainable development articulated at the Rio Conference in 1992 had not been realized as quickly as many had hoped and that, despite continued efforts, the trends in most environmental sectors were still negative. Environmental protection was not a luxury but vital to safeguard the resources of mankind, and he considered global climate change to be the biggest threat. Despite the establishment of the Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Kyoto Protocol, there had been setbacks in the climate process, including the failure of many developed countries to return their CO<sub>2</sub> emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000. He urged Parties, in order to remain credible, to implement at home what they had pledged on the international stage.

7. He then outlined Germany's efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and confirmed its national target to reduce its CO<sub>2</sub> emissions by 25 per cent compared to the 1990 level by the year 2005, as well as its commitment within the context of the European Community burden-sharing. He announced his Government's intention to present a comprehensive national reduction strategy for greenhouse gases by the middle of 2000 which would follow on the existing national programme and lay down necessary further measures. Measures already introduced and to be taken included an ecological tax reform, an energy savings ordinance to reduce CO<sub>2</sub> emissions in buildings, measures in the transport sector and measures for saving energy in private consumption. Climate protection policies provided opportunities not only for protecting the environment but also for preserving and creating modern jobs. Anybody trying to slow down climate protection or merely failing to make progress would lose touch with important markets in the next century.

8. With regard to recent national phenomena, he stated that nobody should be allowed to postpone measures by pointing out remaining scientific uncertainties. Action had to be taken now. The Kyoto Protocol must enter into force by 2002 at the latest, that is ten years after the Rio Conference. In conclusion, he urged developed countries to take the lead in climate protection and to take the domestic action which, of necessity, was the main means of complying with the obligations of Article 3 of the Kyoto Protocol. Only then could it be expected that developing countries would gradually assume commitments in order to limit and, where necessary, reduce their greenhouse gas emissions.

9. Ms. Bärbel Dieckmann, Mayor of the City of Bonn, extended a warm welcome to all participants in the Conference and expressed her great satisfaction that the City of Bonn, which was the seat of the secretariat of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and of other United Nations organizations, should have the honour of hosting a session of the Conference of the Parties. She emphasized that Bonn was on its way to becoming a centre for international cooperation, that it was a member of the Climate Alliance and that it had launched a number of energy-saving and environmental programmes. She underlined the important role cities and their citizens played in the field of climate change. The City of Bonn, in cooperation with a number of organizations based in Bonn, had organized a variety of awareness-raising events to accompany the Conference. In conclusion, the Mayor expressed her best wishes for a successful outcome to the fifth session of the Conference of the Parties.

(Agenda item 1 (e))

10. The Secretary-General, welcoming the presence of Mr. Gerhard Schröder, Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany, at the opening of the Conference as a demonstration of how high the issue of climate change could climb on national agendas, said that, since the entry into force of the Convention, the Parties to it had laid a solid foundation for long-term action to minimize climate change and its consequences. They were building effective institutions and technical capacities at the national level and a credible international system of data-gathering and information-sharing. Targets had been set and a start made on designing a system of compliance. Policy decisions were being based on the best available science, drawing on the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change; cost-effectiveness was being stressed through mechanisms engaging the resources and ingenuity of business and industry; and the work had been opened to the scrutiny of civil society. Those were signs of a maturing international regime and the Parties to the Convention could take pride in their achievements.

11. There was, however, no room for complacency. The efforts being made would bear fruit only if widely understood and supported. The public at large was looking to Bonn for a message. They wanted to hear that countries were fully committed to early domestic efforts to achieve their emission targets. They wanted to be reassured that the strategy devised was fair and inclusive, sensitive to the concerns of vulnerable countries and driven by the need to protect the climate as a global resource. They wanted to see the developing countries being empowered, through finance, technology and capacity-building, to follow environmentally-sound paths of economic development and make their rightful contribution to limiting global emissions. Lastly, they wanted to see evidence that the Clean Development Mechanism, the innovative centrepiece of the Kyoto Protocol, would be ready to be activated immediately after the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties and that the Kyoto Protocol would enter into force by 2002 at the latest.

12. The present period was one of extraordinary technological creativity, with old industries being transformed or replaced by new ones, and the key sectors of energy and transport would not remain static over the coming decades. In the context of the need to be more competitive and less polluting, pioneering firms were already leading the way to green profits, and the Convention and the Protocol were moving with that tide. In conclusion, the Secretary-General said that the United Nations system was ready to be a partner in the process and, in that spirit of partnership, he conveyed to the participants his best wishes for the success of their deliberations.

II. ORGANIZATIONAL MATTERS

(Agenda item 2)

A. Status of ratification of the Convention and its Kyoto Protocol

(Agenda item 2 (a))

13. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 2nd plenary meeting, on 25 October, the Conference of the Parties had before it an information document on the status of ratification of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and its Kyoto Protocol (FCCC/CP/1999/INF.2). On the invitation of the President, the Conference of the Parties took note with satisfaction that, as of 25 October 1999, 179 States and one regional economic integration organization were Parties to the Convention. The Conference of the Parties was informed that São Tomé and Príncipe had also ratified the Convention on 29 September and would thus become a Party on 28 December 1999. The Conference of the Parties further took note that, as of 25 October 1999, 15 Parties had ratified or acceded to the Kyoto Protocol. The President thanked them for taking the lead and urged other Parties to follow them, so as to build political momentum in support of the Protocol.

B. Adoption of the rules of procedure

(Agenda item 2 (b))

14. At the 1st plenary meeting, on 25 October, the President informed the Conference of the Parties that, having received a report from the President of the Conference at its fourth session on her consultations on the draft rules of procedure, he intended to undertake further consultations with a view to reaching a consensus on the unresolved issues. On the proposal of the President, the Conference of the Parties decided that in the meantime, as at previous sessions, the draft rules of procedure as contained in document FCCC/CP/1996/2 should continue to be applied, with the exception of draft rule 42.

15. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 4 November, the President informed the Conference of the Parties that there was still no agreement on the draft rules of procedure. At the same meeting, the Conference of the Parties, on the proposal of the President, decided that the item should be placed on the provisional agenda of its sixth session and requested the President to undertake further consultations.

C. Adoption of the agenda

(Agenda item 2 (c))

16. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 1st plenary meeting, on 25 October, the Conference of the Parties had before it a note by the Executive Secretary containing the provisional agenda and annotations (FCCC/CP/1999/1 and Add.1). The President proposed, on the basis of consultations with the Bureau, that with regard to sub-item 7 (b), "Work programme on mechanisms (decision 7/CP.4)", it should be understood that the work programme on the Kyoto Protocol mechanisms would be dealt with as a whole. The Conference would therefore look at those aspects which were to be acted on by the Conference of the Parties as well as those requiring action by the Conference of the Parties serving as the meeting of the Parties to the Kyoto Protocol at its first session. He further proposed that a new sub-item 7 (f), entitled "Matters relating to Article 3, paragraph 14, of the Kyoto Protocol", should be included, since Article 3, paragraph 14, also called for action by the Conference of the Parties at its first session serving as the meeting of the Parties to the Kyoto Protocol. For practical purposes, that sub-item would be taken up with sub-item 4 (f), "Implementation of Article 4, paragraphs 8 and 9, of the Convention".

17. At the same meeting, the President recalled that item 5 of the provisional agenda, "Second review of the adequacy of Article 4, paragraphs 2 (a) and (b), of the Convention", had been included in accordance with rule 16 of the draft rules of procedure being applied, which provides that “any item of the agenda of an ordinary session, consideration of which has not been completed at the session, shall be included automatically in the agenda of the next ordinary session, unless otherwise decided by the Conference of the Parties.” He informed the Conference of the Parties that the Group of 77 and China had proposed to amend the wording of that item to read as follows: “Review of the adequacy of implementation of Article 4, paragraphs 2 (a) and (b), of the Convention”. There was as yet no agreement on that proposal and it was his intention to undertake further consultations with a view to reaching a consensus. He therefore proposed that the item should be held in abeyance pending the outcome of his consultations. The Conference of the Parties accordingly adopted the provisional agenda as contained in document FCCC/CP/1999/1, with the addition of the new sub-item 7 (f) proposed by the President and with the exception of item 5, which was held in abeyance.

18. At the 10th plenary meeting, on 5 November, on the proposal of the President the Conference of the Parties decided to include item 5, as formulated in the provisional agenda, in the agenda of the fifth session and to conclude, in respect of that item, that it had proved impossible to reach any conclusions or decisions at the present session. Consequently, rule 16 and rule 10 (c) of the draft rules of procedure being applied will continue to apply to this item and the item will be included in the provisional agenda of the sixth session. The amendment to the wording of the item proposed by the Group of 77 and China would be fully recorded in a footnote to the item in the provisional agenda.

19. Upon the adoption of this decision, the representative of the Marshall Islands, speaking on behalf of the Alliance of Small Island States (AOSIS), expressed his disappointment at the procedural nature of the decision. The provisions of Article 4.2 (a) and (b) were central considerations and integral to the balance of the Convention. The procedural impasse did not release Annex I Parties from their obligations, nor did it excuse the Conference of the Parties from its constitutional duty to carry out the review. AOSIS was disappointed at the lack of adequate progress, in terms of long-term emission trends, towards meeting the objective of the Convention. Further delay in beginning to take action would make the prospects for survival of the AOSIS countries even more tenuous. The issue would, in their view, now move automatically to the agenda of the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties, and AOSIS would be ready to discuss it then on the basis of the annotations included in the annotated provisional agenda for the present session.

20. The representative of Finland, speaking on behalf of the European Community and its member States, said that, although the European Community would achieve its commitment under Article 4.2(a) and (b) of the Convention, it acknowledged that many Annex I Parties would be unable to do so and that the commitments in Article 4.2(a) and (b) were insufficient to meet the objective of the Convention. Article 4.2(d) provided the Conference of the Parties with a mechanism by which the gap between commitments and the ultimate objective of the Convention could be measured and appropriate action taken. The question of implementation, however, fell under Article 7.2 and not under the review envisaged in Article 4.2(d). The question of whether Parties were meeting their commitments needed to be kept separate from the question of whether the commitments themselves were adequate. She stated, in conclusion, that the IPCC Third Assessment Report would have an important guiding role in assessing what would be needed in the longer term and would therefore provide a basis for the third review of adequacy at the seventh session of the Conference of the Parties.

21. The representative of Japan said that his country, while accepting the purely procedural conclusion reached at the present session, hoped that there would be no procedural debate at the next session and that it would prove possible to concentrate on the substantive issues.

22. The agenda, as adopted, thus read as follows:

At the 1st plenary meeting, on 25 October, on the proposal of the President, the Conference of the Parties elected by acclamation seven Vice-Presidents and the Rapporteur of the Conference, the Chairman of the Subsidiary Body for Scientific and Technological Advice and the Chairman of the Subsidiary Body for Implementation. The Bureau of the Conference was thus constituted as follows:

President

Mr. Jan Szyszko (Poland)

Vice-Presidents

Mr. Liu Zhenmin (China)
Mr. Papa Cham (the Gambia)
Mr. Yvo de Boer (Netherlands)
Mr. Tuiloma Neroni Slade (Samoa)
Mr. Mohammad Salem Al-Sabban (Saudi Arabia)

E. Admission of organizations as observers

(Agenda item 2 (e))

24. For its consideration of this sub-item at its 2nd plenary meeting, on 25 October, the Conference of the Parties had before it a note by the secretariat on the admission of organizations as observers (FCCC/CP/1999/4 and Add.1), listing two intergovernmental organizations and 36 non-governmental organizations that had requested to be admitted as observers. Pursuant to a recommendation by the Bureau of the Conference, which had reviewed the list of applicant organizations, the Conference of the Parties decided to admit those organizations as observers.

F. Organization of work, including the sessions of the subsidiary bodies

(Agenda item 2 (f))

25. In introducing this sub-item at the 2nd plenary meeting, on 25 October, the President drew the attention of the Conference of the Parties to the annotations thereto in document FCCC/CP/1999/1/Add.1 and to the tentative schedule of meetings contained in document FCCC/CP/1999/1. He said that the bulk of the work of the session would be conducted in the subsidiary bodies, which would have the responsibility of developing draft decisions and conclusions for submission to the Conference of the Parties for adoption. The subsidiary bodies were expected to conclude their work by Wednesday, 3 November, whereupon their Chairmen would report to the plenary on the results achieved and on any outstanding issues. Should further work prove necessary on any given item, the Conference of the Parties might decide to request the President or another member of the Bureau to undertake consultations. Such consultations should be concluded by the evening of Thursday, 4 November, to enable the Conference to close with the adoption of decisions in an orderly manner in the afternoon of Friday, 5 November. The high-level segment attended by ministers and other heads of delegation would be convened from the afternoon of Tuesday, 2 November, until the morning of Thursday, 4 November.

26. The President informed the Conference of the Parties that provision had been made for the holding of two simultaneous meetings with full interpretation facilities each morning and afternoon, including Saturday, 30 October. In addition, it was anticipated that either formal or informal meetings would be held in the evenings.

27. A statement was made under this sub-item by the representative of one Party.

28. At its 3rd plenary meeting, on 27 October, the Conference of the Parties, on the proposal of the President, decided that a time-limit of three to four minutes should be set for the policy statements to be delivered by ministers and other heads of delegation during the high-level segment.

G. Date and venue of the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties

Introducing the sub-item at the 3rd plenary meeting, on 27 October, the Deputy-Secretary of the Conference said that the Conference of the Parties, in its decision 15/CP.4, recalling the discussions concerning the request by Pakistan and Azerbaijan at its third session for the deletion of the name of Turkey from the lists included in Annexes I and II to the Convention, had taken note of the new information submitted by Turkey and had decided to continue the review of the matter under Article 4.2(f) at its fifth session. The President informed the Conference of the Parties that the President of the Conference at its fourth session had held informal consultations with several delegations with a view to finding a solution, but that it had not proved possible to reach a consensus. The President also informed the Conference of the Parties that Azerbaijan had indicated that it wished to maintain its proposal. At the invitation of the President, a statement was made by the representative of Pakistan reiterating its proposal and a statement was made by the observer for Turkey. Further statements were made by the representatives of four Parties.

60. At the same meeting, on the proposal of the President, the Conference of the Parties agreed that the President should undertake informal consultations with a view to concluding the sub-item by the end of the session.

61. The Conference of the Parties then adopted, on the proposal of the President, the conclusions contained in paragraphs 62-63 below.

62. The Conference of the Parties took note of the efforts of Turkey to advance the implementation of the objective of the Convention even at a time when it was not a Party. The Conference of the Parties was encouraged, in particular, by the efforts made by Turkey to implement policies and measures that could lead to a meaningful limitation of greenhouse gas emissions in comparison with a business-as-usual scenario.

63. In recognition of the efforts made by Turkey, the Conference of the Parties requested the President to intensify his search for a satisfactory solution and decided to consider the matter again at its sixth session under an item entitled "Review of information and possible decisions under Article 4, paragraph 2 (f), of the Convention". The Conference of the Parties requested the Executive Secretary to place the item on the provisional agenda for that session.

The Conference of the Parties then adopted, on the proposal of the President, the conclusions contained in paragraphs 67-69 below.

67. The Conference of the Parties noted that any Party may propose amendments to the Convention and its annexes in accordance with Articles 15 and 16 of the Convention. It further noted that any Party not listed in Annex I to the Convention had the right to seek to join Annex I pursuant to those articles. The Conference of the Parties took note that Kazakhstan maintained its proposal for an amendment to add its name to the list in Annex I and was willing to undertake additional consultations to facilitate a decision on the proposal at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties.

68. Many Parties expressed appreciation of the desire of Kazakhstan to assume a larger role in contributing to the ultimate objective of the Convention and of the domestic action already taken by Kazakhstan, as described in its initial national communication as a non-Annex I Party. They pledged continued support for those efforts. Decision 4/CP.3, whereby a number of Parties were included in Annex I under Article 4.2(f) of the Convention, was recalled. Some Parties referred to the provisions of Article 4.2(g) as an alternative to an amendment of Annex I. Others expressed the wish to receive further information from Kazakhstan in support of its proposal.

69. The Conference of the Parties decided to consider the amendment proposed by Kazakhstan at its sixth session, with a view to taking action thereon.

84. At the 5th plenary meeting, on 2 November, the President, welcoming ministers and other heads of delegation to the opening of the high-level segment, said that the presence of so many ministers, not only of the environment but also of energy, development planning, science and technology and the economy, was a clear indication that the climate change process was maturing and that governments were embracing sustainable development. He was particularly encouraged by the presence of a large number of ministers from developing countries. Many developing countries were the most vulnerable to the adverse effects of climate change. They had, however, one important advantage: their economies could evolve without making the environmental mistakes of previous development practices.

85. The world was witnessing more and more signs of climate change. To stem the steady increase in greenhouse gas emissions it had a powerful instrument in the Kyoto Protocol, but it was essential to make it effective and operational as soon as possible. At the last session, the Conference of the Parties had adopted a comprehensive work programme in the Buenos Aires Plan of Action and the present session in Bonn was regarded as a milestone in the process of reaching agreement on the key aspects of that Plan of Action.

86. Positive results had already been achieved at the present session, but to arrive at a meaningful outcome in Bonn required the collective will of ministers to do even more. Their role was to provide political guidance and, above all, to inject momentum into the negotiations in order to move them forward decisively. It was essential to reaffirm the commitment to meeting the deadline of the sixth session of the Conference for reaching agreement on the outstanding issues, and it was his intention to propose a short decision to that effect. Lastly, to echo the words of the Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany in his statement at the opening of the Conference, it was also essential that the Kyoto Protocol enter into force by the year 2002 at the latest, that is, ten years after the Rio Conference.

87. The representative of the Secretary-General of the United Nations, Mr. Klaus Töpfer, Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme, recalled that at the opening of the session the Secretary-General had delivered a clear message to governments, non-governmental organizations, civil society and private business. He had called for action, commitment and political leadership to meet the hopes and aspirations of the majority of the world population, which had recently passed the 6 billion threshold. There was clear scientific evidence that climate change, linked to human activities, was a most pressing challenge, threatening the survival of human communities, natural species and ecosystems around the world. It was the poorest and most densely populated regions of the world that would suffer most if mitigation action was postponed. There was a need to change technologies and human behaviour, and adjust production and consumption patterns, and develop lifestyles in sustainable directions. Technologies were available, or could be developed and implemented, to decrease greenhouse gas emissions in developed countries for which targets were agreed in the Kyoto Protocol. There should be no further delay. A start could be made by undertaking pilot projects with civil society and private business in areas such as higher energy efficiency, renewable energies and decrease of deforestation. There was also a need for greater solidarity between developed and developing countries. The latter needed to stimulate development in order to overcome poverty and they had to be given the chance to do so in a sustainable manner.

88. It was essential that the Conference of the Parties should take the opportunity of the present session to give an honest signal of political leadership and of unquestioned commitment to the implementation of the Conference, through the development of effective monitoring, reporting and compliance systems, and rapid progress in the ratification of the Kyoto Protocol, which must enter into force by the year 2002 at the latest. It should send a clear message to the world that the global family, regardless of different interests and responsibilities, should unite in its efforts to fight climate change, for the good of the earth and to ensure a better world for future generations.

89. The Executive Secretary said that the arrival of ministers provided a political opportunity to build confidence in the success of the negotiations on the Buenos Aires Plan of Action. There were a number of ways in which that could be achieved. Firstly, the leading industrial economies could demonstrate their engagement in early domestic action as part of their effort to reach the Kyoto targets, and the industrializing developing countries could demonstrate their recognition of the developmental gains to be made from a climate-friendly economy. All Parties needed to be sensitive to the human dimension of vulnerability, tragically underlined by the recent cyclone in India. Secondly, the innovative Clean Development Mechanism could become the cornerstone of a North-South compact at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties. It needed to be made attractive to private sector investment in sustainable development. Business and industry needed to be given positive signals, such as an affirmation that Parties would make arrangements for an early start to the Clean Development Mechanism. Thirdly, the present session had provided an opportunity to address the bottlenecks in the delivery and consideration of national communications from developing countries. He welcomed the emerging decisions on that subject and on capacity-building and the fact that a further nine non-Annex I Parties had submitted their initial national communications at the present session. In all, 22 such communications had been received. Fourthly, the credibility of the Kyoto Protocol regime had to remain a central concern: a regime that would permit the Kyoto targets to be achieved solely through hot air and sinks would undermine the commitment to modify longer-term emission trends. While the mechanisms of the Protocol and compliance remained key issues, the soundness of national emissions inventories and their technical review must not be overlooked. Progress on those technical issues at the current session had been encouraging. Lastly, a negotiating process needed deadlines. Pressure had to be maintained to achieve results at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties, with a view to bringing the Kyoto Protocol into force by 2002. At the same time, Parties should look ahead to the continuation of the process beyond the sixth session, including the review of the Protocol by the second session of the Conference serving as the Meeting of the Parties, the 2005 performance benchmark, and the continuation of the Protocol into the second and future commitment periods without a break.

90. Climate change was a thread in the fabric of global relations. The main breakthroughs in the climate change negotiations could be achieved only in that global strategic context. He therefore appealed to ministers to integrate the Convention and the Protocol in that broader international agenda, so that the global venture could advance successfully to the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties and beyond.

B. Policy statements

(Agenda item 9 (b))

91. At the 5th plenary meeting, on 2 November, policy statements were made by 96 ministers and other heads of delegation.<sup>6</sup> For the list of speakers, see annex I below.

C. Exchange of views among participants

(Agenda item 9 (c))

92. An informal exchange of views was held at the 6th and 7th plenary meetings, on 3 November, under the chairmanship of the President, assisted by two ministers from countries represented on the Bureau, Ms. Guro Fjellanger, Minister of Environment of Norway, and Mr. Kezimbira Miyingo, Minister of State for Environment of Uganda, who acted as co-chairs. The discussions focused on two main topics, namely, "Progress made in dealing with climate change: lessons and challenges" and "The way forward: promoting implementation of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action and early entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol". There was extensive participation by ministers and other heads of delegation in the informal exchange of views.

93. At the 8th plenary meeting, on 4 November, the President expressed his appreciation to his two co-chairs for their invaluable assistance in leading the discussions. In presenting his personal impressions of the informal exchange of views, he said that it had, in his view, helped to promote dialogue and mutual understanding and he hoped that there would be an opportunity to hold similar exchanges at future sessions of the Conference of the Parties. There were a number of messages emerging from the discussion that he wished to highlight.

94. Annex I countries had reported that they were designing and putting in place domestic policies and measures to reduce emissions in all sectors, such as market mechanisms, tax reform, removal of subsidies, voluntary programmes and domestic emissions trading. Particular stress had been laid on energy efficiency and saving, renewables and sinks, as well as the important role of civil society and the private sector. Many ministers had emphasized that implementing emissions reduction policies was not an easy matter, as they demanded major social and economic changes, but that the benefits derived made action worthwhile and costs were often lower than expected. Action should not be left until the entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol. Annex I Parties had also reported on complementary actions abroad and had reiterated their commitment to cooperating with and assisting others.

95. Many non-Annex I countries, while describing the significant gap in income levels, and in levels of per capita emissions, between developed and developing countries as disquieting, had

In addition, it is possible to select each statement by topic by accessing the Earth Negotiations Bulletin (ENB) web site (<http://www.iisd.ca/climate/cop5>). It should be noted that the views expressed by ENB may not necessarily represent those of the UNFCCC secretariat.

reported on the action they were taking to limit the growth of their emissions, within the context of national sustainable development plans. Such actions were described as win-win solutions because of the multiple benefits derived.

96. Great concern had been expressed that the impacts of climate change were already being felt. Storms, drought, irregular weather, epidemics and natural disasters were imparting a new sense of urgency to the negotiations. Often it was the most vulnerable who bore the brunt of those impacts; for them adaptation was as important as mitigation. For many Parties, the adverse effects of possible response measures were of great concern and needed to be suitably addressed.

97. The importance for developing countries of capacity-building and transfer of technology had been emphasized many times. Action in those areas clearly had to be a priority for all Parties if developing countries were to become full partners in the process of combating climate change.

98. As regards the negotiating process itself, the President said that he sensed a new spirit of determination and commitment to success, which was an encouraging sign for the difficult year ahead when many compromises would be required from all sides. He also had a clear impression that ministers wished to be involved at critical points in order to guide the negotiations to a successful conclusion. There was general agreement that the negotiating process needed to be intensified, with an increase in the number of sessions, supplemented by a number of workshops and consultations. Some had proposed the use of a facilitator or the establishment of a committee of the whole. However, many others had strongly felt that the existing structures provided a sufficient platform for the conduct of the negotiations. He was encouraged by the confidence placed in him to take all necessary steps to intensify the negotiations on all issues in order to ensure a successful outcome at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties. Participation by developing countries was an essential ingredient of that process of intensification.<sup>7</sup>

99. Lastly, ministers and senior officials had reaffirmed their commitment at the political level to achieve results at the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties within the framework of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action, and had expressed their strong support for the early entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol, some pointing to the tenth anniversary of the Rio Conference, the year 2002, as a desirable deadline.

<sup>7</sup> The President later presented a draft decision encompassing some of these ideas. The decision was adopted by the Conference as decision 1/CP.5.

XI. OTHER MATTERS

(Agenda item 11)

104. At the 2nd plenary meeting, on 25 October, the President recalled that the Conference of the Parties, in its decision 10/CP.4, had decided to review, at its fifth session, the outstanding issues pertaining to the establishment of a multilateral consultative process and had invited the President of the Conference to conduct consultations on those issues during the inter-sessional period, with the aim of identifying solutions. Unfortunately, it had not proved possible to reach agreement in those consultations. He therefore proposed to request Mr. Slade, Vice-President of the Conference, to conduct further consultations on the outstanding issues and to keep him informed of any developments.

105. At the 9th plenary meeting, on 4 November, Mr. Slade, Vice-President of the Conference, reported on the outcome of his consultations, indicating that consensus on the outstanding issues had not yet been achieved. The Conference of the Parties, on the proposal of the President, decided to defer consideration of this matter to its sixth session.
